Jaina studies are expanding and increasingly gaining in international recognition. Counterbalancing an earlier bias towards research on the Shvetambara community and on north-western India, there are a number of recent surveys on the Digambaras in the South. These studies, however, have generally neglected the modern State of Karnataka. This historically and culturally significant region, in which Jainism has played a major role, forms the focus of the present volume. Despite its emphasis on Digambara Jainism and on Karnataka, the book includes many references to other religious groups striving for supremacy in the region, and to neighbouring States in the wider area of South India.

In addition to the novel emphases in terms of religious and regional approach, this collection of thirteen research papers revolves around the question of what is heritage and who defines it. The scholarly contributions combine the latest findings from the three main disciplines of history, art and architecture, and religious studies—with ample citations from literature, epigraphy, archaeology and anthropology. In their entirety they widen our understanding of the concept of heritage and approach hitherto neglected areas of research. Particularly important are the contributions providing fresh evidence on political history, and the rise and subsequent relative decline of the Jaina community in the South. Equally significant are the investigations into neglected and so-far unknown areas of architectural history, combined with the provision of revised interpretations of known sites. The scholarly contributions from religious studies emphasise the distinction and resilience of the Digambara Jainas and outline religious change over a period stretching from the early centuries BCE to the present day.

By introducing new areas of enquiry, identifying important signifiers of heritage, reinterpreting earlier findings, drawing on modern South Asian studies, and combining research findings from across a number of academic fields in an interdisciplinary manner, this collection of specialist papers reveals new ways of seeing and understanding the splendour and complexities of the Jaina heritage. In doing so, it opens up a number of new questions concerning the construction and preservation of the heritages of other groups and regions of South Asia and the wider world as well.

Julia A.B. Hegewald is Professor and Head, Department of Asian and Islamic Art History, Institute for Oriental and Asian Studies, University of Bonn, Germany.
CONTRIBUTORS

Willem B. Bollée
Robert J. Del Bontà
Miki Desai
Shantinath Dibbad
Julia A. B. Hegewald
Vatsala Iyengar
M. S. Krishna Murthy
P. N. Narasimha Murthy
Aloka Parasher-Sen
Pius Fidelis Pinto
Sabine Scholz
Pratyush Shankar
R. V. S. Sundaram
K. M. Suresh

Published 2011

2011 | 338 pages | Hardback | ISBN: 978-8187374671

ca. 67,-€

To order, visit: www.amazon.de or Sanskriti

---

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword by Prof. Dr. Willem B. Bollée
Preface
1. Julia A. B. Hegewald:
Introduction: The Jaina Heritage of Southern India and Karnataka

PART 1: HISTORY
2. R. V. S. Sundaram:
Elements of Jaina History in Kannada Literature

3. P. N. Narasimha Murthy:
History of Jainism in Karnataka: Developments from the Tenth to Thirteenth Centuries CE

4. Shantinath Dibbad:
The Construction, Destruction and Renovation of Jaina Basadis: A Historical Perspective

5. Pius Fidelis Pinto:
Jainism in the Vijayanagara Empire: The Survival of the Religion in the Capital and in the Coastal Region of Karnataka

PART 2: ART AND ARCHITECTURE
6. M. S. Krishna Murthy:
The Development of Jaina Temple Architecture in Southern Karnataka: From the Beginning to c. 1300 CE
7. Robert J. Del Bontà: The Shantinatha Basadi at Jinanathapura

PART 3: RELIGION
12. Aloka Parasher-Sen: Jaina Women, Ritual Death and the Deccan

13. Vatsala Iyengar: Jaina Goddesses and their Worship in Karnataka

14. Sabine Scholz: The Revival of the Digambara Muni Tradition in Karnataka during the Twentieth Century

Glossary
List of Figures
List of Plates
List of Contributors
Index